The Becker Family M&M's - February 2019 Update

What do camping and Christmas have in common? For the Beckers, it usually indicates a move! In November we learned that we had sufficient funding to leave for our training course at the end of December. We completed our pack-out, and enjoyed the holidays in an empty house. This was accomplished with a borrowed tree, pots and pans, and even tents! We cherished our time with friends in King George and even gained a Ukulele in the process (to be played in the van during our road trip, of course!)

We're HOME FREE — The bittersweet sale of our "forever home" was finalized on January 25, 2019.

BECKER ROAD TRIP: VA to CO 2019

It's not the most direct route from Virginia to Colorado, unless you intend to visit as many loved ones as possible, drop off a vehicle in Ohio, take in the Ark Encounter (arkencounter.com), flee from torrential rain, pick up some "new" states the kids hadn't yet visited, and drop off family heirlooms. WHAT a ride.

Our Jan. 7-Feb. 2 course at Mission Training International (mti.org/compass) included full days of courses, simulations, counseling, and lots of snow for all nine Beckers. COMPASS was insightful, challenging, and blessed us with a community of 38 other missionaries/families who are doing some of the same crazy things we are! What encouragement to be found. There were many takeaways, but one in particular has taken root, especially to help young and transitioning hearts make sense of how bad and good can coexist. Please meet the "Yay" Duck and the "Yuck" Duck - A Pair of Ducks (paradox). This pair of ducks swim together. The "yay" is real and so is the "yuck." It is miserable to leave your home and friends. The transition is chaotic. YUCK!! It is exciting to see the world for the cause of Christ and see the Lord work. YAY!! The ducks swim together. Both are good. It is a paradox.
